This is an article and not really an exhibit. The illustrations totally overpower the stamps --perhaps a different color matte is called for such as a light blue. The non-standard page arrangement is confusing even with the colored borders (which are not totally obvious). It would be suggested that if you do not used the standard arrangement of four horizontal rows you use four large panels in the frame.

The large illustrations and the large amount of blank space might be an indication that there is not enough material for a single frame exhibit.
